

Anne Vallée Ecological Fund

2020 Scholarships

The Anne Vallée Ecological Fund was established in memory of Anne Vallée, a biologist from Laval University (1979) who died of a work accident in 1982 at the now named "Anne Vallée Ecological Reserve" of Triangle Island, BC. She was doing field work on the Tufted Puffin during Master studies at the University of British Columbia.

The Fund is incorporated in Québec and recognized by Canada Revenue Agency and Revenu Québec. It has been constituted following donations of parents and friends. The Fund aims to support field research in animal ecology, in relation with the impact of human activities such as forestry, industry, agriculture and fishing.

Since 1983, the Ecological Fund has attributed a total of 60 awards to candidates from different universities.

In 2018, two $ 1,500 scholarships were awarded, first to François-Étienne Sylvain of Laval University for his research on the "Impact des perturbations anthropique, telles que l'agriculture sur brulis, sur l'intégrité des écosystèmes aquatiques de l'Amazonie", and Stacey Michelle-Hrushowy of Simon Fraser University for her research on "Viral surveillance and impacts on wilds British Colombia salmonids".

In 2019, two $ 1,500 scholarships were awarded first to Fabien St-Pierre of Université du Québec à Rimouski for his research on "Impact de l'âge et du calibre des chemins forestiers sur l'utilisation des grands mammifères (caribou, loup, ours, orignal)" and to Rachel Beverly Munger of the Simon Fraser University for her research on "Functional roles of exploited sea cucumbers in driving seagrass productivity".

This year, two $1500 awards are offered to graduated students in biology in Québec or British Colombia.

All applications must be made using the form supplied by the fund and should be sent before March 15th 2020 to:
