WRITING WITH INTEGRITY

Communicating your research and ideas effectively and ethically requires being accurate, objective, honest, and clear. This means understanding the writing conventions of your academic discipline and being attuned to and adept at all practices that ensure those objectives are met. This interactive workshop will:

- review important ethical principles and practices in academic writing, including:
  - the avoidance of plagiarism,
  - proper citation, and
  - accurate representation of ideas and findings
- provide strategies for ensuring that written work meets the highest ethical standards
- include examples from the social sciences/humanities and the life/physical science
